LUH staff allegedly refuse to treat patient 'wearing unclean clothes'

By Mohammad Hussain Khan

HYDERABAD: Staff, including doctors, at the casualty ward of Liaquat University Hospital (LUH) avoided treating an unidentified patient brought to the hospital by Edhi volunteers, on the ground that he was quite unclean.

The doctors and staff present on the duty said the patient should be given bath and cleaned and then they would begin treatment inside the casualty ward. The patient was taken to the LUH by an Edhi ambulance's driver, Tahir Ali, according to Edhi Centre incharge Mohammad Mukhtiar.

Tahir found the patient almost unconscious in a street with his hand lying in a small sewage drain in Hala Naka area after he was informed by concerned police. He got a letter from the police station before shifting him to the LUH. The man was bleeding from the mouth and needed urgent medical care. "Nobody was attending him in the street and I somehow, along with a Rescue 1122 personnel, lifted and shifted him to the ambulance", Tahir told Dawn.

Tahir said that when he took him to the LUH casualty ward, hospital guards didn't let him go inside ward. "I informed the duty doctors about the patient. Three to four female doctors were present in the casualty ward, but I was told that the patient be cleansed first and only then they would check him," Tahir said.

Tahir informed Mukhtiar about the doctors' response. "Our centre's incharge sent clothes and then I again informed the doctors in an emotional tone that now the patient has been readied like a groom. Will you now check him?" said Tahir. He said that the patient didn't have any identity with him and since he was in semi unconscious condition, he didn't respond to anything.

He said that in the meantime while he was changing his unclean clothes, someone recorded the scene on mobile phone and circulated it on social media. He said that a male doctor then came to him after being told by the guards that his video had been recorded. Then, he said, the patient was examined and given treatment in the casualty ward.

Virtues of G.M. Syed's political character extolled at academic debate

By Mohammad Hussain Khan

HYDERABAD: Speakers have said it was the character of late G. M. Syed that he was influencing generations as a politician.

He wanted to lead the nationalist struggle along secular and progressive lines, they added.

They were speaking at an academic debate programme on the book The Sun of Sindh, a compilation of G.M. Syed's life and writings, by Zafar Junejo at the local press club the other day.

At the event organised by the Hyderabad Roshan Khayal Forum, the speakers stated that Syed had tried to take the struggle on the lines he had envisioned; he not only conceded his errors but also identified them in writing.

They stated Syed had started the struggle from scratch in an era marked by colonial leanings. Feudal lords were also dominating the political landscape then. But, they said, Syed was the only politician who was influencing generations.

Zafar Junejo in his views said that many authors had written on G. M. Syed in English and purpose of a book was always to educate people. He said Syed as a politician had influenced generations.

G M Syed Foundation's head Dr Zia Shah said that the foundation was established in 1995 and it was to ensure publication of Syed's unpublished works. He said that people born post-1995 neither met nor heard Syed. He said young generations needed to study him.

He said GM Syed had started his politics in 1937 by questioning land allotments. Allama I. I. Kazi had taught Syed and Elsa Kazi also produced a book on Syed who also remained under the tutelage of Mirza Kaleech Baig.

Jeay Sindh Mahaz chairman Abdul Khaliq Junejo regretted that a detailed biography of G.M. Syed could not be produced, but 'The Sun of Sindh' might help fill that void to some extent. He said Syed was a self-respecting soul and added that Sindh was dominated by jagidars, backed by colonial forces, in the region. He said Syed didn't inherit any struggle, thus he had to start his efforts from scratch in the subcontinent.

He pointed out that while one could say that the passage of pro-Pakistan resolution was Syed's mistake, but people should talk about his post-resolution character, too. Syed's books Sindh Ja Soorma and Paigham-i-Latif were reflective of his concept of modern quam parasti because he was influenced by nationalism seen in Europe in 17th and 18th centuries movements, he said. G.M. Syed bequeathed the asset of 'nationalist struggle'.

Syed was a proponent of the right to self-determination and he had opposed the MRD because it centered on the restoration of 1973 Constitution which talked about 'one nation' while the MRD revolved around 'changes of faces'.

He maintained that G.M. Syed was a man of high stature who questioned jagirdari in Sindh all alone. It was Syed who worked extensively on secularism which remained unmatchable to date and if people of Sindh were offering resistance, it was due to Syed's philosophy. "G.M. Syed needs to be understood if one wants to understand qaumi tahreek [nationalist struggle]," he remarked and quoted historian Dr Mubarak Ali as having observed Syed wrote history from people's perspective, otherwise history was written from the rulers' point of view.

Awami Workers Party leader Dr Bukhshal Thallu said Sindh's three generations were influenced by Syed's thoughts. He said G. M. Syed not only laid the foundation stone of nationalist struggle, but also founded 'hari tahreek' which then went on to accommodate men like Comrade Zaheer, Comrade Jam Saqi etc. He however, argued that Syed's strong opposition to the MRD was a mistake, adding that Syed had his failings but still he stood tall.

Intellectual Jaffar Ahmed said that earlier Hyder Bux Jatoi's book was not sold but then it was published by G.M. Syed Memorial in the US for which stuff was provided by Khadim Soomro and Mansoor Qadir Junejo.

Majeed Chandio said Syed was targeted by religious and secular elements. He praised Zafar Junejo for coming up with the book and recalled that Syed started his politics from Tahreek-i-Khilafat and many political luminaries of the era used to descend on Sann, Syed's hometown. He said Syed himself had admitted his own mistakes.

Dr Hameed Soomro noted that present conditions confronting Sindh demanded that the path shown by Syed should be talked about in order to rid people of the present morass. He was critical of the fact that intellectuals today were unable to build some narrative and Zafar Junejo had also done the same thing by eulogising Syed in the book without producing a narrative. He, however, said that 'forum' would keep holding such debates on books.

SAU entry test attracts over 5,000 candidates

HYDRABAD: The Sindh Agriculture University (SAU), Tandojam, on Sunday held an entry test for undergraduate degree programmes for 2025–26 academic year and attracted impressive 5,707 candidates, including 905 female students, across examination centres established in Hyderabad, Sukkur, Umerkot and Quetta.

An SAU announcement said that Hyderabad centre recorded the highest participation where 4,247 candidates, including 741 girls, appeared for the test in Public School Latifabad.

Simultaneously, the test was held in IBA Public School Sukkur, Government Degree College Umerkot and Balochistan University of Information Technology, Engineering and Management Sciences Quetta. Umerkot hosted 560 male and 66 female candidates; Sukkur received 640 male and 96 female candidates; while Quetta accommodated 96 male and two female candidates.

It said that the test consisted of 100 multiple choice questions (MCQs) to be completed in 100 minutes. For smooth conduct of the test in Hyderabad, 62 blocks were created, including 11 girls-only, 49 pre-medical, 12 pre-engineering and one combined block.

For the upcoming academic session, 1,785 seats were earmarked for the main campus, 318 for the Umerkot campus, and 220 for Khairpur College of Agricultural and Management Sciences.

Stringent measures like walk-through gates, police deployment and SAU's internal security teams, to ensure a secure environment, were implemented across all four centers. Acting VC Prof Dr Altaf Ali Siyal visited the Hyderabad center, reviewed arrangements, and interacted with candidates for their feedback.

He said that a large turnout reflected students' growing confidence in modern academic programmes. He added that the SAU was introducing integrated degree programmes aligned with advanced agricultural sciences, emerging technologies and evolving market demands to help graduates compete both locally and globally. —Staff Correspondent
